Raw Honey Collection

Pine Honey

Naturally produced in the ancient pine forests of Türkiye's Aegean region, this unique honey is not derived from flower nectar but from pine tree honeydew collected by bees. The result is a dark, dense and slow-crystallizing honey with a deep woody aroma and long-lasting taste profile.

It is especially valued for its mineral richness and stable structure, making it one of the most distinctive honey types in global honey markets.

Chestnut Honey

Harvested from chestnut forest regions of Türkiye, this honey is known for its strong, slightly bitter and highly aromatic profile. Its intense flavor comes from the unique chestnut blossoms, creating a powerful taste that is instantly recognizable.

It is considered a premium gourmet honey in international markets due to its limited production, dark color, and complex flavor structure that lingers on the palate.

Flower (Wildflower) Honey

Collected from a wide variety of wildflowers in highland and meadow regions of Türkiye, this honey represents a naturally balanced and seasonal floral composition. Each harvest carries a slightly different aroma profile depending on the botanical diversity of the region.

It is smooth, easy to consume, and widely preferred for daily use due to its light texture, natural sweetness, and well-rounded flavor.

Lavender Honey

Harvested from lavender-rich regions of Türkiye, this honey carries a refined floral aroma with soft herbal undertones. Its light texture and elegant sweetness create a smooth and calming taste experience that stands out in premium wellness and gourmet markets.

It is especially valued for its aromatic profile and lifestyle appeal, making it a strong export product in luxury food and natural product segments.
